BNSF FEATURES:

- Former ATSF
- Individual decoration and colors applied to match each road number

Starting in 1995, many former ATSF Dash 9s were patched with BNSF reporting marks instead of being fully repainted. According to heritageunits.com, many of them remain in service as of 2025. Railfans are often on the lookout for these "pink bonnets" due to their unique aged appearance.

ATSF FEATURES:

- As-delivered details
- Sinclair & EOT antennas
- Prime air filters & air dryer
- Leslie RS3L horn
- Early ("dog-leg") stepwell gussets
- ATSF-specific plow with open MU doors
- Front-only ditch lights mounted on pilot face
- Truck & nose grab iron style per prototype road #

ATSF 600-699 were some of the last units delivered to Santa Fe before the BNSF merger. Painted in the famous "Superfleet" scheme, they handled priority trains across the system. Being relatively new, the units were a low priority for repainting, and several survive today wearing their faded original paint.

- Early ("dog leg") stepwell gussets
- Large SP plow
- Sinclair antennas

The 51- mile Eagle Mountain Railroad was constructed by the Kaiser Steel Corp. to move iron ore from its namesake mine to Ferrum, a connection with the SP Sunset Route. The line was closed in 1986. But what if operations continued?

In its final years, the line operated using GE U30Cs which were built to SP specs. If new power was required, then Dash 9s (also built to SP specs) would be a logical choice, as we have presented here.

PROTOTYPE SPECIFIC INFORMATION

Built by GE from 1993 until 2004, the Dash 9-44CW and its variants were the definitive North American mainline freight locomotives of their time, with an impressive 3668 total units built. Constructed for US railroads from coast to coast, the units were also ordered by Canadian roads, and significant export orders went to Australia and Brazil.

The Athearn Genesis Dash 9-44CW is equally as impressive as its prototype, with a host of railroad specific details. From Canadian National's unique "tear drop" windows to the early body details on Southern Pacific and Santa Fe, these models take the Genesis line to new heights. Standard on all models are Athearn's superior paint colors, reliable Genesis drive and LED lighting for years of trouble-free operation.
